“ I remember the first day I met you. You looked up from the Thanksgiving Day table with a turkey leg in hand and the biggest grin on your face that would make the Joker jealous. I then got the chance to teach you the ways of Rock and Roll and that there was other music out there besides Michael Bolton. I also got the chance to take you to your first major rock concert and make fun of Austin when he wussed out. I'm gonna miss ya brother, I really am. You were a good soul who didn't always get the good end, but you made the best of it. You were creative with an imagination that you could get lost in. Your tattoo drawings could have won awards. Always there to lend a hand and never complained, not once. You weren't afraid of working hard when the time came. I'm gonna miss you man. You were a great Uncle to my kids with the patience of someone twice your age when it came to them. I didn't tell you nearly enough, but I love ya kid. Keep on rocking.

“ Jesse you are going to be missed you had a wonderful heart, and you were very loving. I will never forget our last conversation it was such a good talk. I'm so glad I got to see you that day, but it hurts my heart that that was the last hug and I love you that I would get from you. I love you and will miss you. My love is with Russel and Lisa and all the brothers and sisters.

“ I know it's been some years since I was part of Jesses life but whenever memories pop up that involve him it always takes me back to that once small little home town that we grew up in and reminds me of the group of friends that shaped me to be the person I am today.

Jesse was part of my life all through high school and even before then, but it was high school that really brought us together. We spent so many nights and weekends at the Chases that it was like a second home. He was the friend that loved you unconditionally and always told you the truth even if it wasn't what you wanted to hear. He was always there for you when you needed a friend and would drop everything if something was wrong. I wish I could hug you one more time or give you a big cheesy smile and some silly optimistic outlook on life that you always griped to me about having. I hope you lived life to the fullest these last 10 years. Love you always.

“ My baby brother, Jesse only to see you again, only to hug your neck again, only talk to you again, only to make fun of you again. I never cut you an a bit of slack and you never expect me to either. Your heart was the size of Texas brother, your love for our family was known and understood. You lived life to its fullest everyday with no regrets! Your addictive personality and smile was contagious. There will be a hole in our hearts forever without you. We love you and will forever miss you we will never forget you and who you are. We will celebrate your life one beer-a-Rita at a time. Till we see each other again I love you so very much.

“ I can still hear your laugh and man, does it make me smile. I'll never forget the late nights in your living room watching y'all play video games, the tongue clicks you used instead of actual words that Inman somehow always understood, and that one time you called him a baby for having a stomach ache when he actually had appendicitis and had to go to the hospital. I also really loved your suit jacket phase. We love you forever and we will miss you always. What I'd give to hear "hey sweetheart" one more time. See you when we see you. ❤️

“ I’ll remember Jesse for a lot. I’ll mostly remember him for being my first good friend when I moved here. He helped me feel like I could actually be accepted by other humans. I’ll remember him for always being there for me to talk to and laugh with. I’ll remember that even though he didn’t always show it, he loved very hard. I’ll remember getting so frustrated with him for not looking me in the eye. I remember him treating me like a brother. I’ll forever cherish our memories and be saddened we didn’t get to create more. RIP Jesse. You’ll always be my brother and I love you.
