I knew Marvin back in the 60's, went fishing and playing cards with him and my dad. He was truly a great guy. Wondered and tried to find him for a while, so sorry to hear of his passing. R.I.P. My friend. Tom Jones

“ This winter I was remembering an old friend, one who I hadn't seen in many years, & his birthday bonfires: On what seemed to be the coldest day of the year, my old friend would faithfully build a raging bonfire & merrily invite friends to come & enjoy! At first I thought : Who would ever think to attempt such an event in this cold weather? But year after year, people would come & enjoy, & year after year, his fires warmed everyone, & Sleepy always made room for all. As true in everyday life, the fires of Sleepy's loving, warm friendship & passion for life insulated many from the cold.

I missed my old friend & was considering to look him up, hoping to let him know what a powerful figure he was & maybe enjoy a bit of rekindled friendship. Instead, too soon, I find myself not knowing quite how to offer heart-felt sympathies to the significant people in Sleepy's life. Sleepy was such a remarkable person, though, that there is much to be said as I remember your husband, father, brother, & friend. Sleepy was a unique, definitely one-of-a-kind leader of a man with many dimensions of talent:

'Sleepy The Artist' had a perceptive vision for tiny, perhaps even obscure details in people as well as objects, that only he had the ability to enhance into fine qualities.

'Sleepy The Builder' could easily unite teams of people to strive toward positive outcomes as easily as he could construct homes & buildings.

'Sleepy The Teacher' was integrally strong to be honest within himself & encourage honesty from others. He demonstrated boldness to timid hearts.

'Sleepy The Counselor' supported people as they found ways through their own unknown emotional territories.

'Sleepy The Friend' never let go of the people he cared about, & he did all this & more with love.

An early memory of 'Sleepy the Visionary' brings to mind him showing me a photo he'd taken of his hand: In the close-up he was holding a deeply hued,transluscent, prism-like bobble, directing, "Do you see that, do you see that? Look at that!" in referenceto the brilliant beam shining through the bobble. I can still hear Sleepy's voice asking the same, "Do you see that?" & see the gleam in Sleepy's bright, smiling eyes revealing Sleepy's well-known secrets to life's happiness: to approach every situation with enduring, compassionate love & the ease of a hearty laugh.

I wish comfort to Sleepy's special people. Sleepy left behind a legacy of admiring friends. The spirit of Sleepy dwells in lifelong impressions that will live forever in our hearts. I feel lucky to have known Sleepy.

“ Awe, what a wonderful photograph! Pictures the true Sleepy. Don't think I ever met any of Sleepy's family, except Edward. He would remember me as Jackie's sister. Some really great times were shared with Sleepy - many adventures - all fondly remembered. He never showed me anything but kindness and generosity - shared everything. His heart was sweet - he lived for the moment - he left many friends. Sleep tight, sweet prince. Jami

“ Here's to a dear ole friend, Sleepy. Always full of good natured antics and the one that brought life to a lot of parties. We had some large times and some awesome camp fires together, back in the days of ore. Let's not forget to mention some good food and drink too. He liked the element of surprise and to make sure his friends had a good time. I miss the special calling cards he always left when popping in for a missed visit. He would inconspicuously rearrange something around our place, to let us know he had been there. It was a neat way of letting us know he had stopped by. For years now, everytime I see something out of place, I think of him and wonder if he has been there. I guess now, I'll wonder if he's sending me a message from the other side. He was always good to go and Lord knows, always on the go. Flying solo most everywhere he went. I enjoyed years of good friendship, some good fishing and have fond memories of the places we use to go. It's hard to say goodbye to an ole friend. But I would imagine he's stoking a nice warm campfire right now preparing for his visit with his maker, family and friends. Thanks for the warm feeling you stirred inside me Sleepy. It was fun philosophizing with you and knowing you were always around. I pray you're free of any pain now. With deepest sympathy to the ones you left behind.

Love,
Jackie

“ Sleepy lived his life exactly how he wanted and did exactly what he wanted to do. He was fearless, strong-willed and opinionated. You never wondered where he stood on any issue! He had a great smile and a good heart. He will be sorely missed.
