“ I have such wonderful memories of your mother. I spent a great deal of time in your home as we were growing up. Some snippets that immediately came to mind: I always loved her pristine starched curtains in the dining room and kitchen. It was as if they were standing at attention awaiting her inspection. She taught me about soft boiled eggs, which have been a favorite of mine ever since (we only had hard boiled eggs at our house). She seemed to always have time to fix us tuna salad sandwiches. Barbara, back in the days of the petticoats, she did yours in gelatin and dried them so that they stood straight out...so many of us were envious of your look. She made you the potato sack shift for the school skit. Many, many memories come to mind. I know that you all will miss her terribly and I hope that your pain will soon lessen.
Love & Hugs,
Sally Jane
