“Papa Nick, Oh How I Miss You More Everyday. It's been 5 years and almost 2 months. I'm 15 now. I start driving soon. I wish you would've been here for the past few years we've all grown up so much. We all miss you so bad. Every once in awhile I'll break down and cry because you aren't here to make everything better anymore. To make me laugh even on my worst days. You aren't here to beat with uncle David on who can give me more money for my straight A's. I hope Jesus finally gave you some teeth. I think Mammaw still has yours, you always told us she stole your teeth. I watched home videos a while back of one of my birthday parties and when I saw you I couldn't help myself I started crying. Insisting on dad to take me to your gravesite. I needed to see my papa nick. You were my Bestfriend. The only one I had at some points. I know dad misses you too because one day awhile back All I could do was think of you and cry and dad just hugged me and cried too. I wish you wouldn't have left me so soon. Even though I know you've been by my side ever step of the way you aren't physically here to touch and talk to. Sometimes I call your old house number..it's disconnected but everytime I have a small hope that you'll answer and tell me it was all just a joke and that it was time for me to come over. You always told me to wash my face because of my freckles...the day of your funeral I did. Maybe you're reading this from heaven or maybe you have your own computer set up up there of course you would be the only one able to do such a thing or maybe you're sitting right here next to me reading this as I type and cry my eyes out I know what you'd be saying if you were here "I love you Emily everything will be okay, I promise.". I made it through my freshman year. Good grades all the way through and I hope I've made you proud. After you passed things got rough and in the last year or so me and Mammaw have talked about you a lot. Good things so don't worry. I love you with every single part of me and I miss you more than I'd miss oxygen if it left my lungs for good. If only I could see you one more time. Hug you one more time. I'd be a happier girl. The toys that used to be in the bottom drawer in your kitchen; I still have them in my special memories box. I keep living on because I know you're watching over me and I know you'll be first in line meeting me at heavens gates when it's my time. I do have a question for you though..since you've been in heaven has God gone digital yet or does he still have all names in a book? (: I love you and miss you soo much. Love always Your First Grand Daughter Emily Marie
