

Theokles Chase Tunning

April 7, 2025 - February 10, 2026

Theokles Chase Tunning, beloved son of Toby and Siana Tunning, passed peacefully in the arms of his parents on February 10th, after a courageous and extraordinary journey that touched countless lives.

Theo was born on April 7, 2025, at just 24 weeks gestation weighing 14oz-tiny, fragile, but immediately a warrior. Though his beginning was uncertain and many odds were stacked against him, his life was anything but insignificant. For the short time we were gifted with Theo, he fought with a strength that humbled seasoned doctors and inspired those who learned of his story.

He taught those around him what resilience looks like, what unconditional love feels like, and how even the smallest life can leave the deepest imprint-without using any words.

Theo endured more in his short life than most do in a lifetime. His life is defined not by the length of his days, but by the depths of his impact.

Most importantly though, Theo truly lived up to his name sake- "Glory to God". While on this 309 day journey, his parents knew that every new path for Theo was a way for him to bring together friends, family, nurses, doctors, and even strangers who followed his journey through Facebook. Each day was a new opportunity for Theo's story to touch the hearts within the community he built and bring them closer to God.

He is survived by his loving parents, Siana and Toby, grandparents, countless aunts, uncles, and cousins. Theo joins his G-pa, Scott Fisher, in eternal peace.

Though our arms ache in his absence, we find comfort in knowing that Theo knew nothing but love. He was held. He was cherished. He was celebrated. He was our miracle child.

A service to honor Theo's life will be held at University Heights Baptist Church in Huntsville, TX at 1:00 PM on February 16th, 2026.

We would love to see our guests wear either baby blue or navy blue and white in Theo's honor.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions can be made to the following organizations who helped our family while in the NICU:

<https://www.nofearfoundation.com/donations>

<https://making-memories-for-myles.square.site/s/shop>

<https://compassionatetouch.org/>

<https://caidenshope.org/#menu>

Theo's light will never dim. His fighting spirit will echo in our souls until we take our last breath. His legacy lives on in the strength he gave us, the love he taught us, and the reminder that even the briefest star can illuminate the darkest sky.

What a blessing your whole family has been to me. I started seeing your posts probably in late November and I have been praying for you guys ever since. I don't normally look at facebook but once I saw little Theo, I instantly fell in love with him. I found myself constantly checking FB just to see if he was getting better. I kept praying and praying for your family. I was devastated when you guys had to make a decision that will probably be the hardest decision you ever made. Watching your family walk through this has encouraged me to keep pressing forward. Even know you had Theo for such a short time, he was such a tremendous blessing.

God chose two wonderful parents for Theo. Even though we don't understand the roads he puts us on I know he has a plan we cannot see until we get to Heaven. Keep trusting in his perfect will that will make sense when you get to hold your sweet baby boy again. I have watched all of your posts and prayed. My first grandson was born 3 months early and went to meet Jesus at 28 days old in 2024. Your family will be in my prayers. Love to all of you during this difficult time.

I wrote a note and accidentally deleted it, so I'm trying again, You and Little Man have been on my heart ever since I saw the first Facebook post with his precious imagine. God could not have chosen more dedicated, loving, nurturing parents than you. He knew just who Theo needed in his little corner.

You encouraged your son, you loved him with a deep and abiding love... you did all and more that two loving parents could have done. I'm so proud of you and my heart is broken with the weight of this loss you will carry the rest of your earthly days.

Theo knew he was loved. He felt it in your touch, in your sweet words, your singing and talking to him. Hold those precious memories close until you can hold him again in Heaven some day.

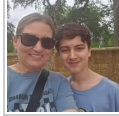

May our prayers bring you comfort.

Prayers for strength and healing during your time of grief. What you did was selfless by releasing Theo from pain and struggle. I never met him but I was deeply affected by his story and I cried hysterically when I found out he died. You'll continue to be in my thoughts and prayers and know that Theo is in the loving arms of Jesus.

Connie Peli - February 14 at 04:19 PM

Im so sorry for your loss, Prayers for peace, strength, comfort. Hugs. Thank you for sharing your sweet baby boy with all of us. He was very well loved.

Kim Johnson - February 15 at 01:30 PM

My deepest sympathy, condolences, prayers and love to both of you, your family, friends, and to the absolutely massive army that stood behind your sweet baby. At times like these, the phrases "I'm so sorry for your loss" and "I'm praying for you all", just seem to be not enough.

This baby was so loved, through every second of each and everyday. God could not have chosen any better parents than the two of you. Through each hardship, moments of pain and struggle, and basically the unknown, this precious boy knew of nothing but pure love. Your pure dedication and unwavering support for Theo created an online following that came to love this baby as their own, and although 99% of his loyal following never even got to meet him in person, we all felt apart of the family. I'm sure I speak for all of us in saying that we all would wait with baited breaths for each and every one of the updates, always hoping that good news and miracles would be the topic of the day.

As the end drew closer, our hearts broke along with yours when you made the selfless and courageous decision to allow Theo to begin his final journey Home. We shed actual tears and many cried our hearts out. These last few weeks, even with the stress of trying to get back to Texas for his final days, were both soul-crushing and full of grief, yet at the same time it felt as if peace & calmness were taking over.

There will always be questions, always be some anger, and always be some sense of not understanding reasons. Grief does lessen, grief does get worse, and grief does remain.

A popular saying recently is that grief is like glitter; in the beginning, it's absolutely everywhere and on and in everything. Then you clean it up, and try and continue on. But one day you'll open a drawer and find a pile of it in the corner; one day you'll open a closet and it'll come raining down on you; you will go days, sometimes weeks without seeing a single speck of glitter, but then for a week straight it's everywhere again. Grief isn't universal, but ever changing and always different for each of us.

Again, the clichéd "I'm sorry for your loss" and "I'm praying for you all" seem monotonous, but with absolute sincerity, we are all so sorry for your loss, and we all are truly praying for peace and love at this time, and for the remainder of your days here on Earth. Your arms are unfortunately empty now, but one day your arms will be full again, and then they'll never be empty again! Your precious boy is healed and knows no pain, and rests safely in the arms of God until you're reunited forever. He will run and play with the other children of Heaven who are also waiting for their Mummy & Daddy. He'll go from waiting for you, to running to you!

I and the rest of Theo's army wish we could all be there in person for what I know is the beautiful service that you have planned, but not all of us are local unfortunately. We're all over the world!! Imagine that!! You have a global army behind you all!! I will definitely be attending the service online. With so many of us, I hope the server can support us all!! Sending love, prayers, strength and some sense of peace from my community here in South Carolina.

Theo was Transfiguration from that sickly little fighter, into a beautiful & strong little boy to play with other children and visit with family that passed before him! I know that Theo left this Earth and his Mama's arms, he jumped into the Lord's arms! He will waiting in Heaven now for his family!*

“ Siana, Toby, and family - my heart hurts with you and for you in this loss. The video you created is a treasure chest of precious moments and memories that brings great value to precious Theo's all too brief life. I have followed his story for months on Facebook, checking each night for an update, prying and crying for a miracle. We sadly did not get the healing that we prayed for, but Theo is whole and healthy now and just waiting for you to join him in heaven. I know no words can take away your pain and loss, but I pray an extra measure of God's amazing grace, peace, and love over these next long days. You are loved and I know one day I will meet sweet Theo in heaven. What a glorious day that will be for us all. Many hugs...
